There are many people in the world that do good things for people who are less fortunate, and we should admire them. Anthony Rizzo is the person I admire because he does a lot of good things on and off the baseball field. He helps young cancer patients during their tough times by raising and donating money to their cause. He is also an admirable athlete because he makes a lot of good plays on the baseball field. The pillar of character I chose is caring because he does a lot of caring things for other people.

Anthony Rizzo helps cancer victims by raising and donating money for the Anthony Rizzo Family Foundation. He realized during his own battle with cancer that it was not only difficult for him, but for his family too. First of all, his foundation has raised over $3.5 million to the Ann and Robert H. Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago. The money helps cancer patients and their families with medical bills and expenses. Secondly, he often visits to the hospital throughout the year to visit the sick kids. He provides hope and happiness to these children to keep fighting just like he did. In summary, he donates his time and money to help these kids and families through their battles with cancer.

Anthony Rizzo is a great baseball player too. For example, he makes great plays in the field, hits home runs, and is a popular teammate. He is the person that I try to be like during my games. In addition, he has experienced many accomplishments like winning the World Series and winning other awards. His accomplishments make me want to push myself harder to be better.

Therefore, he is a very good baseball player to learn from.

As a result, Rizzo has helped many people on and off the field in life. He has made differences in peoples' lives by helping young cancer patients get through difficult times. His caring character make people want to be his fans on and off the field.
